ANSWER

Admittedly,advancing technology has revolutionized every sphere of human life. Like others, i too assert that modern telecommunication keeps people away from society as i it is destroying face to face interaction and communication among people .

Indeed ,continuously up gradation of gadgets and interactive software programs makes people patronize the latest communication regime. Consequently,more populace is now being obsessed of using these types of communication. To exemplify,vast majority of individuals are frequently online to check notifications from various applications that they use for communication, and they spent longer time on their gadgets than socializing in person with their peers, workmates, and families. Therefore,their relationship with the society and people are being ruined because of their isolation with the environment.

Proving further, telephoning system leads to loss the art of conversation as people who connect through technology with others ,might find it difficult to engage in normal conversation, since they may have issues understanding non-verbal cues due to lack of practice with face-to-face interaction that cannot be paused, edited or filtered. In other words ,it also resulted in lack of confidence as individuals feel hesitation while have to address large gathering. Thus interaction by gadgets has a detrimental effect on social life of people.

To conclude, I believe that these tools are making the world smaller but away from each other. To maintain healthy social life, predilection towards such gadgets should be minimized